Q23 Following is a newspaper story describing a contest between two candidates for election to the U.S. Senate in a nearby American state. Please read the story carefully and then answer the questions that follow. Brown, McDuffy in Narrow Race for Senate The election for U.S. Senate next week offers voters an unusually clear choice of the future of country. David

Brown has promised that, if elected, he will work for free medical care for all residents of the United States to be paid for by higher taxes on wealthy Americans. James McDuffy takes quite different positions. He favors tax cuts for business to stimulate growth of the economy, limits on the availability of abortion, and complete freedom to buy and possess guns. Polls show that Brown currently has a narrow lead in the race, but experts said the race is a toss-up and will be settled by next week's debate between the candidates at the Downtown Club. Based on the positions taken by these two candidates, please try to guess their positions on this next set of issues:
